"Risk comes from not knowing what you're doing." - Warren Buffett

2017 is shaping up to be another attention-grabbing year in political and economic circles globally. As a result of surprises like Brexit and Donald Trump being elected as US President in 2016, we are bound to see some interesting developments in markets worldwide.

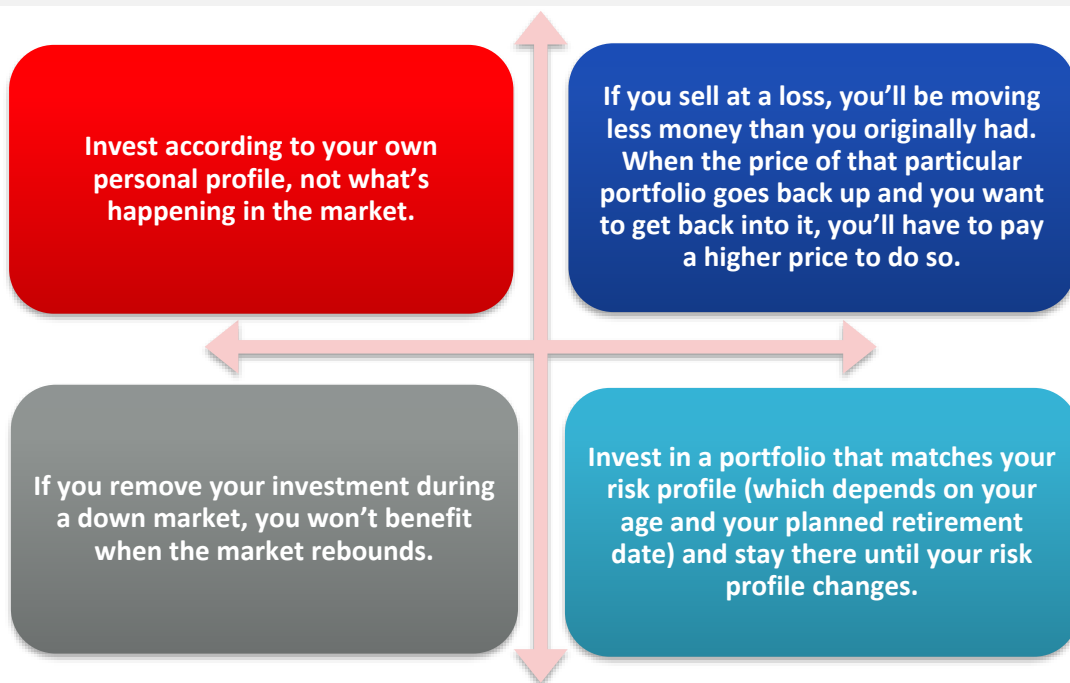

BE WARNED: often, when there are shifts in the markets due to international developments, temptation to tweak your investments becomes a problem! Chances are that we will all likely be faced with a tempting investment option as the markets start to reflect all these ups and downs.

There is no 'fast-track' for financial freedom

REMEMBER: if something seems too good to be true... run! Fairytales and economics don't mix. Always speak to your financial advisor before making any decisions.

Remember that your Retirement Fund planning is a long-term initiative. Although you should be aware of what is happening in the market, you should not base your investment switches on short-term historical performance.

Here are some investment 'road rules' to take note of:

Just like busy and quiet lanes on the highway, markets are constantly rising and falling, which means the value of your investment changes all the time. Even the experts can't accurately predict the markets. So it's best to keep calm and settle in for a long journey.
